Chattanooga, September 6.-(Special.)-The final game of the 1910 season between the Chattanooga and Birmingham Southern league clubs will go down in history as one grand slugging match. The final figures were 10 to 4, with the Barons on the long end. Singles, doubles and triples rained in profusion during the centest, Eddie Slever started out for the Lookouts but he soon gave way to Victor Schlitzer who was scarcely as effective as the former "Tiger." Ivor Wagner worked for the Barons, and while he was not as effective as on former occasions, he pitched good ball compared to that of his NASHVILLE BEATS Birmingham went at the work in a methodical manner. In the first inning the Barons got one hit, in the second fourth four and in the next five innings

The Barons scored in every session exept the first and fifth, and every member of the club got at least one hit except Marcan, Messenger led in the slugging, getting two triples and two sinles in five times up. Wagner and Elliott, the battery members, also secured three hits each, and one of Elliott's was for Patterson, two sacks. two sacks The Lookouts' six hits were divided between as many players and at no time Erloff, cf. except the fifth and eighth innings did Case, p. the Lookouts appear dangerous. Wagner's wildness was largely responsible for the cluster of runs made by Chattanooga in the fifth, and another tally might have been added in the eighth but for Pfenninger's failure to see a play at first base in which he called McMahon out, although McGilvray failed to touch him. It was on a snap throw from Elliott after McMahon had singled. Be that as it may, it would not have affected the final score at all.

The Barons reeled off some fast plays and made no less than three double plays ously scored it as a hit, Messenger also

It would be a long and tedious story to attempt a detail of how the Barons rolled up their 16 hits and 10 runs, but a close study of the box score will show some interesting dope to the fan who revels in the dope.

MEMPHIS DROPS INTO LAST PLACE

Memphis, Tenn., September 6 .- Today's game developed a new "tail-ender" in the Southern league pennant race, Memphis dropping into the position occupied by Mobile since early in the season. Bunched hits at the start and the effectiveness of Chappelle won. Allen started the game for Memphis but after allowing three runs in the first inning, Goodwin was substituted for him. He was hit freely but managed to keep them scattered.

POINTERS TO FANDOM

Today marks the close of baseball in Birmingham. With the day the season of 1910 becomes a memory.

No more until again the fields are green will we see the hefty Molesworth spread his wings as some bird of prey prepared to light on quivering victim. No more will we see the speedy Messenger circle bases as some fearful deer pursued by hound. No more will one be thrilled by the screaming bingles off the bat of Bill McGilvray, and the speed of Counterly will be rough. Covaleski will no more cause one to marvel. No more will the rowdy El-liott throw like shot to keystone, or prance in the dust on the coach-

After today it is all over for Birmingham. But the season has been

"Tank" Tyson, secretary of the Birmingham club, has written the sporting editor that which he and all the fans have known for several weeks—that the game today will be between the Barons and the Pelicans and that Covaleski and Hess against each other will be pitted.

So the final game of the season in Birmingham will not only be be tween the best teams of the league, the Barons and the Pels, but will be a battle between the best flingers of the circuit, Covaleski and Hess. Such a bill will result in the park being filled to overflowing this afternoon. It will be not only the final game of the 1910 season for Birmingham fans but it should be as good as any other that has gone before this year-or any previous year.

Yesterday's battle in Chattanooga became a slaughter. - The Baron bats were working—and this tells the tale.

Sixteen hits for a total of 26 bases! The record has seldom been beaten this season.

Messenger led the hitters with four, two for three bases and two for . Wagner and Elliott got three each, and one of the latter's went for a couple. In addition Ellam, Molesworth and McBride connected for doubles. Bill McGilvray was able to connect but once, but that swat of his counted for three sacks.

Atlanta, led by Flaherty, defeated New Orleans and brought the Pelicans closer to the Barons than they were yesterday noon. We are glad that the Crackers wen because it had become whispered about that they were fighting tamely in order that Birmingham might have no chance Mobile scored a splendid victory over Memphis and got out of that hole in which it has dwelled for many moons. Nashville trounced Montgomery and today the Tumblers and the Gulls are on equal ground. Mobile is the favorite for a higher berth than seventh.

Secretary Tyson, in announcing the fact that Covaleski and Hess will fling today's game spoke such glowing truths concerning this department of The Age-Herald that we thought our cup was running over. But Tyson's tribute sinks to a lowly level when we revel in the lines coming from a Peli City banker, who, were he not such a fine financier, would be a better poet in which the inimitable Bobo, the trenchant Bill Ax, and others who have contributed to this page, are handled in such capable style that their names are certain to be household words for years to come or until time is no more.

Verily, it pays to be an umpire, even if the dispute in question is only one between a squad of miry Elks and a platoon of dampened Shrin-

JOY IN REEDTOWN

George Reed (convalescent patient). "How sweet it is at dewy eve, of grim despair to lay the ghost, And find oneself at perfest ease among the well anointed host."

"Better though it is by far, to travel much, although one finds Himself at last on earth from star, among the lowly, humble kinds."

While passing through the horrid gates of those lowly regions of unmitigated despair, over which one may read, "Abandon hope, ye who enter here"; in spite of the grewsome thoughts that must of necessity gallop in wild disorder through his weary breast, it is quite possible that C. Babb, leader of the forlorn Turtle colony, finds consolation in the fact that there he has been before.

And while in some respects the elevation of George Reed resembles the fate of Callisto, whose mortal beauty was a thorn in the side of imperial Juno (she who knitted the socks of one Jove), unlike that woman of ancient fable, the commander-in-chief of that piping flock of Seagulis does not become, with his transportation to the skies, a "great bear" destined continually to shine. But though Reed's little drove of downy birds of the sea is still scarcely able to flap its wings above the crest of the gulf, and though the danger of a return to the humble ranks of the "down and out" is imminent, there is just cause for the burning of incense and the slaughtering of the gamboler of the field down in Mobile. The zest of that celebration will remain incomparable until Atlanta does the well nigh impossible and overhauls the flying Barons, or until Atlanta does the well nigh impossible and overhauls the flying Barons, or the Barons astound by plucking the tail feathers of that all conquering cousin of the Seaguil, the Pelican. And Mobile's feat in climbing from the cellar, of the Seagull, the Pelican. And Mobile's feat in climbing from the cellar, after a sojourn in that darksome, loathsome dungeon, where mortals eternally doomed to grovel, is worthy of emula-tion, and the laurel wreath around the brow of Birmingham, were she to surpass New Orleans, would be of growth brow of Birmingham, were she to surpass New Orleans, would be of growth so luxuriant, or of color, no more pleasing green than that which today, with becoming modesty, be it known, George Reed bears.

It is ever the repetition of that historic cry, "The king is dead; long live the king!" And with this sentiment, while our hallelujahs ring out as joyously as did those of the terrified tillers of the sod when Apollo regained his chariot after the plunging career of Phaeton, his son, let us, in consolation, drop a tear with Charlie Babb.

There he sits, the condemned criminal. He is again in that miserable cell which throughout the goodly season of 1909 he occupied. The mob cries for his head; and the mob will have it. The members of that frenzied horde are not emotional to be moved by a Mark Antony. But they have suffered—long and miserably, though patiently. And because of this fact there is absolutely and miserably, though patiently. And because of this fact there is absolutely no hope. It is but a matter of a moment, ere the body of Babb, torn and bleeding, will be food for jackals. His fate is that of every man in defeat. Past glories serve him little. That splendid triumph of yesterday is no panacea for the burning shame of the defeat of today.

Reed's present moment of victory may not preserve his sceptre. But when he goes out it will not be with the accompaniment of funeral music. It is even possible that his passing will call for the salute of a single con-possible that his passing will call for the salute of a single gun. But not so with Babb; not so with Greminger.

HATCHER SHOT BY YOUNG LADY

PISTOL IS ACCIDENTALLY DIS-CHARGED AND BULLET ENTERS

morning at 10:30 when J. M. Hatcher, an employe of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power company, was accidentally shot at his home, 1014 First avenue, by Miss Carrie Prophet, Miss Prophet was holding the revolver while Hatcher was examining another that a manner the weapon was discharged and the bullet struck Hatcher in the neck just above the collar bone. The shot was so close that he was badly burned about the face by powder. He was rushed to St. Vincent's hospital in Shaw's ambulance and it was found that his wound was not serious.

> the company were examining two revolvers with a view to exchanging. Miss Prophet was standing near also looking at the two revolvers. Having examined one Miss Prophet was asked to hold it while the other was looked at. She threw up the pistol and it was accidently discharged with the above result. It is considered marvelous that Hatcher was not instantly killed.
